

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

November 26, 2008

Dear Prospective Students and Colleagues,

I am writing to let you know about the good things happening in the Ph.D. program at the Georgetown Department of Government.

Georgetown is an excellent place to get a Ph.D. We are part of a distinguished university in an excellent location. But our real asset is our strong, research-oriented faculty. We have steadily climbed in the Hix Global Ranking of Political Science Departments (<http://www.politicalstudies.org/pdf/psr/hix.pdf>). In addition, we were pleased to see that Georgetown came in fourth when Thomson-Reuters ranked universities based on papers in political science journals from 2002 to 2006 (http://sciencewatch.com/dr/sci/08/mar16-08_1/).

Or, perhaps it is best to see for yourself.

Georgetown has other strengths in addition to its research-oriented faculty. Being in a historic part of the most powerful city in the world makes this an exciting place to study. It also provides an incredible array of opportunities for deepening graduate research: students can take classes at other Washington area schools and frequently have one member of their dissertation committee from another school or a think tank in the area.

Our fellowships are competitive. For incoming students, we offer five years of funding that covers tuition and a stipend of over $18,000. We have several teaching opportunities available to students, in addition to regular chances to be a teaching assistant or research assistant.

Our recent graduates have tenure-track jobs at many excellent institutions, including:

- Cornell University
- University of Wisconsin at Madison
- LBJ School of Public Policy at the University of Texas at Austin
- George Washington University
- George Mason University
- University of California at Riverside
- Villanova University
- Carleton University

In addition, our Ph.D.s have been winning prestigious fellowships, including ones from the Belfer Center at Harvard, Princeton and Brookings.

Part of our placement success is due to our strong record of working closely with students, including a number of publications that are jointly co-authored with students.

The bottom line? Exciting things are happening in the Ph.D. program at Georgetown and we invite you or your students to be part of them.

Sincerely,

Mike
